Eh, it fails to grab me in any way really, and its anomalous means of reproduction seem kinda tacked on. Also,I noticed that if reproduction generates larvae, then why is it necessary to state that any eggs must be fumigated (unless by larvae you mean developing larvae in eggs)?

Echoing the fact that this is well-written but just a bit too bland. The concept is certainly creepy in a 'I don't want bugs in my ears' kind of way, but doesn't seem weird enough to be an SCP.

Just tossing ideas around, but... maybe they make you emit noises to attract more of them? Or lead you to their nests by making sounds you want to follow?

I would like to express interest in rewriting this SCP. Will PM to the author and copy the code for now.

Update: Original author gave me the O.K.

Given the age of the article, I'm voting against deletion for the present, so the Rewrite Team can get involved.

Please wait until Decibelle (current captain) weighs in before progressing with the vote.

Edit: djraktus is the rewrite team contact for this article. Page is now tagged with in-rewrite.

"SCP-1186 will find and incapacitate prey in quiet environment"

Please, PLEASE put in the missing A. Small criticism, just something that bothers me. Otherwise, pretty solid article I think. I didn't enjoy it that much, but I think it deserved a +1.
